

Trading & Markets

Cahill's Trading & Markets practice delivers practical and actionable legal and regulatory advice on complex issues relating to traded products and their related marketplaces. These products include securities and commodities as well as assets for which the applicable regulatory framework may be less clear, such as cryptocurrencies and other digital assets.

Clients of our practice include dealers, investors, issuers and trading platforms such as exchanges, and are just as likely to be traditional financial services firms as they are to be FinTechs or digital asset companies.

Our advice ranges from proactive guidance on new product offerings and organizational structuring to reactive advice in response to changes in regulation or other market events. For clients needing advice on litigation and enforcement matters, we work closely with Cahill's Broker Dealer Litigation and Enforcement team.

We are also a valued resource for clients seeking to understand how regulatory changes in constantly evolving markets can impact them. We understand our clients' businesses, their touchpoints to the markets and what matters to their success. Our deep practical experience directly advising banks, broker-dealers, FCMs, swap dealers and ATS's, coupled with the market-leading knowledge of Cahill's Cryptocurrency and FinTech Practice position Cahill as the go-to firm for trading and markets clients.
