On September 24th & 25th, Cahill sponsored the 36th Annual International Antitrust Law & Policy Conference at Fordham Law School.

The two-day program focused on a wide range of issues related to antitrust policy and enforcement. Leaders in the field, representing competition authorities, the judiciary, private practice and the academia, contributed to the conference as speakers and discussants.

The conference attracts close to 400 participants, including competition authorities from Africa, Asia, Europe, Latin/South America and North America, as well as practitioners and academics.
