Cross-border investigations are often triggered in the U.S. and abroad by whistleblowers and hotlines. There are several factors that must be considered when facing investigating authorities in cross-border investigations as the laws both in the U.S. and other countries where witnesses and evidence may be located can give rise to complications.

On Thursday, October 11, 2018, Cahill partner Anirudh Bansal and Cahill counsel John Spagna presented a webinar and discussed recent developments in cross-border investigations, which included:

- Developments in legal privilege
- Data privacy laws and cross-border data transfers
- U.S. jurisdictional reach
- Recent agency and court rulings
