
Cahill Wins Appeal in Second Circuit for Time Warner Cable

Date: 05/07/13

A Cahill litigation team prevailed on behalf of Time Warner Cable Inc. in an appeal filed in the Second Circuit, alleging the Company's advertisements concerning the speed of its Road Runner Internet service were false and misleading. On May 6th, 2013, the Second Circuit Court affirmed the ruling below by the Southern District of New York in Time Warner Cable's favor, finding that the Plaintiffs had not shown enough proof that Time Warner's advertisements were actionable under New York and California consumer protection statutes.
