

Cahill Featured in "Law Firm Sustainability: Creating a Robust Sustainability Program" Article

Date: 10/18/18

The impact we have on our environment has become increasingly more important and law firms, such as Cahill, are making great strides to reduce their carbon footprint and be more socially responsible through the development of their sustainability programs. Beyond reducing their environmental impact, sustainability programs are also encouraging operation efficiencies, reducing costs, strengthening client relationships and fostering a deeper office community.

In the article, "Law Firm Sustainability: Creating a Robust Sustainability Program", the author highlights the top ten elements of a highly effective programs and shows how Cahill and other law firms are putting these aspects into action.