
Cahill Partner Brad Bondi once again named as one of the “Enforcement 40” by Securities Docket. The Enforcement 40 recognizes the “best and brightest securities enforcement defense lawyers in the country.”

Date: 10/28/20

External Link: For more information, please visit securitiesdocket.com

Partner Brad Bondi has once again been named to the “Enforcement 40” list by Securities Docket. The Enforcement 40 recognizes the “best and brightest securities enforcement defense lawyers in the country.” The lawyers on this list come from some of the top firms in the world and have played key roles in the most noteworthy SEC enforcement matters in the past decade. Only 40 outstanding men and women were selected for this high honor, and Brad has been selected all three times the list has been published since 2013.

Brad Bondi is a nationally recognized litigation partner and board advisor in Cahill’s litigation department and the Chair of the firm’s White Collar and Government Investigations Practice Group. Securities Docket previously described Brad as “the first choice among Boards of Directors and Audit Committees of the Fortune 500 when their company is faced with SEC or DOJ problems.” Brad has two decades of experience representing and counseling companies, financial institutions, boards of directors, audit committees, and senior executives in a broad range of investigations and complex business litigation, with an emphasis on securities and financial regulations and corporate governance matters. He previously held senior positions in government, including at the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Attorney

- Bradley J. Bondi