
Edward O’Callaghan and Peter Mazzone Co-Author “The Revolving Nature of Economic Sanctions Enforcement as a Key Financial Weapon in U.S. National Security Policy” in Fordham International Law Journal

Date: 08/13/25

Cahill partner Ed O’Callaghan and counsel Peter Mazzone co-authored the article, “The Revolving Nature of Economic Sanctions Enforcement as a Key Financial Weapon in U.S. National Security Policy,” which was published by Fordham International Law Journal.

In the article, Ed and Peter explore the role of economic sanctions in supporting and developing U.S. national security policy. They also examine the execution of the policy, which is conducted through the issuance of regulations and the pursuit of government policy prosecutions related to the infringement of such regulations.
