Cahill partners Gregory Strong and Sarah Chen, counsel Brian Farber, and associate Amil Malik authored the USA Law and Practice chapter of the Chambers Blockchain & Crypto-Assets 2026 guide, providing an overview of the legal and regulatory issues shaping blockchain and digital assets in the United States.

The chapter examines key developments affecting market participants in the United States, including the evolution of blockchain use cases, laws and regulations affecting blockchain technology, smart contracts, crypto asset treatment, access to banking, tax, insolvency, and the role of industry and trade bodies.

As blockchain technology and crypto-assets continue to evolve, the chapter underscores the importance of understanding both the legal foundations and practical regulatory considerations in this rapidly evolving area.
